Crime Adventure Pack

editing and contributions by Alessio Serini

Setting Information

- The Crime Adventure Pack can be set in modern times or in any time period that supports a criminal underworld.
- The location could be a sprawling metropolis with a thriving criminal underworld or a smaller city with a more contained criminal element. The setting could also be a rural area with a history of organized crime.
- The cultural and historical details could reflect the criminal activity and the state of law enforcement in the area. For example, the setting could be influenced by the prohibition era, organized crime in the 1920s and 1930s, or the rise of street gangs in the late 20th century.
- The criminal underworld could be made up of various organized crime syndicates, street gangs, and individual criminals. These groups could be in competition with one another or could be working together towards a common goal.
- The state of law enforcement in the setting is an important aspect to consider. Are the police overworked and underfunded, struggling to keep up with the criminal element? Or are they well-equipped and well-trained, making it difficult for criminals to operate without getting caught?

Special Rules:

Heat

- The protagonist must manage the heat they generate from their criminal activities, which can attract the attention of law enforcement and rival criminal organizations.
- Ask a closed question based on the roll result to determine the outcome of the interaction:
 1. “No and”: You fail to avoid the attention of law enforcement and your criminal activities become known to a rival organization.
 2. “No”: You fail to keep your criminal activities a secret, attracting the attention of law enforcement.
 3. “No but”: You avoid the attention of law enforcement, but your criminal activities are discovered by a rival organization.
 4. “Yes but”: You are able to keep your criminal activities a secret, but only by taking measures that attract the attention of rival organizations.
 5. “Yes”: You are able to keep your criminal activities a secret and avoid the attention of both law enforcement and rival organizations.

6. “Yes and”: You are able to keep your criminal activities a secret and gain the favor of both law enforcement and rival organizations.

Influence

The protagonist must build and maintain relationships with other criminals, politicians, and law enforcement officials to gain information, favors, and protection.

Building Relationships

- When trying to build a relationship with a criminal organization, ask a closed question. On a result of:
 1. “No and”: The relationship takes a turn for the worse, and they become hostile towards you.
 2. “No”: The relationship remains unchanged, and you do not make any progress.
 3. “No but”: The relationship remains unchanged, but you gather some information about them.
 4. “Yes but”: You make some progress in building the relationship, but it requires more effort on your part.
 5. “Yes”: You successfully build the relationship, and they become more willing to work with you.
 6. “Yes and”: Not only do you build the relationship, but they also offer you a favor or valuable information.

Maintaining Relationships

- When trying to maintain a relationship with a criminal organization, ask a closed question. On a result of:
 1. “No and”: The relationship takes a turn for the worse, and they become hostile towards you.
 2. “No”: The relationship remains unchanged, and you do not make any progress.
 3. “No but”: The relationship remains unchanged, but you gather some information about them.
 4. “Yes but”: You manage to maintain the relationship, but it requires more effort on your part.
 5. “Yes”: You successfully maintain the relationship, and they continue to work with you.
 6. “Yes and”: Not only do you maintain the relationship, but they also offer you a favor or valuable information.

Gaining Information

- When trying to gain information from a criminal organization, ask a closed question. On a result of:
 1. “No and”: You do not get any information and things get worse.
 2. “No”: You do not receive any information.
 3. “No but”: You do not receive any information, but you gather some insight into their operations.
 4. “Yes but”: You receive some information, but it is limited and requires further investigation.
 5. “Yes”: You receive valuable information that can aid in your criminal activities.
 6. “Yes and”: Not only do you receive valuable information, but they also offer you a favor or protection.

Interrogation

- When attempting to extract information from a suspect, witness, or informant, the protagonist must make a roll using their negotiation, intimidation, or investigation skills.
- Then ask a closed question based on the roll result to determine the outcome of the interaction:
 1. “No and”: The target refuses to cooperate and their resolve is strengthened.
 2. “No”: The target refuses to cooperate.
 3. “No but”: The target refuses to cooperate, but offers some limited information.
 4. “Yes but”: The target cooperates, but with reluctance and under duress.
 5. “Yes”: The target cooperates willingly.
 6. “Yes and”: The target not only cooperates, but is also willing to offer additional information or assistance.
